

ABSTRACT

A digital communication link establishment control mechanism, termed 'dial on off-hook' (DOO) call routing, is incorporated into call routing control software employed by the microcontroller of an integrated access device (IAD). The DOO routine automatically routes an outgoing call to a user pre-specified destination number of a called circuit, in response to detecting an off-hook signalling state of the calling circuit. No user dialing is required.